| 5 dolls set. The design of this doll set is based on the Russian folk tale about a little round bun, Kolobok. It is one of the first tales that probably every Russian-speaking child learns. This set will make a great present to any child or a whole family. A Russian Fairy Tale "Kolobok" - The Little Round Bun "Once upon a time, there lived an old woman and an old man who were very poor and very hungry. The old man asked the old woman to bake him a bun. "How can I do that, old man," she asked, "if we don't have any flour?" "Go out to the storage shed and sweep it up, and you will have enough flour for a bun," said the old man. So the old lady went out to the shed and swept up a couple of cups of flour, and baked a small round bun. She put the bun on the table by the window. The bun got bored just sitting by the window, so he jumped onto the window sill, and from there rolled onto the grass and then onto the road. The bun enjoyed rolling along the road. Soon he rolled past a bunny, who said, "Little bun, I am going to eat you!" The bun sang, "I am a little | bun, made from flour swept from the shed, baked in the oven and cooled by the window. I ran away from the old woman, I ran away from the old man, and I will run away from you!" With this words, he rolled passed the bunny and on his way further. Then the bun saw a wolf, who said,

"Little bun, I am going to eat you!"
The bun sang, "I am a little bun, made from flour swept from the shed, baked in the oven and cooled by the window. I ran away from the old woman, I ran away from the old man, I ran away from the bunny, and I will run away from you!" And so he did.
Then the bun saw a fox, who said,
"Hello, little bun, aren't you a pretty brown thing?" The bun was pleased by the praise, and sang,
"I am a little bun, made from flour swept from the shed, baked in the oven and cooled by the window. I ran away from the old woman, I ran away from the old man, I ran away from the bunny, I ran away from the wolf, and I will run away from you!"
The fox said, "What a nice song! But I am getting old, and I can't hear the song very well. Come here and sit on my nose, and I will be able to hear it better." The bun was flattered that the fox liked his song, so he jumped up on her nose and sang,
"I am a little bun!" And the fox opened up her mouth and gobbled up the little bun."

Ukrainian Village

Modele Imat000004

Lena Sachuk

This set of dolls was inspired by the Ukrainian traditional historical costumes. Folk costume is a basic element of a country's culture and craft, closely tied with its whole history.

Even though there are numerous variations of Ukrainian national costumes, based on the different regions, certain components of Ukrainian folk dress are universal: shirts, skirts, and sleeveless jacket or vest. Both men's and women's shirts were sewn from homespun and home-woven linen or hempen cloth, polotno. Folk-shirts were long-sleeved, and generally quite lengthy, falling to the ankles or mid-calf. In most regions of Ukraine, men's shirts are worn over the trousers. Both men's and women's shirts have their opening down the center front. The opening edges of the women's shirts are minimally decorated with embroidery, while the men's shirts are more heavily embroidered along both openings, forming a unified design when the shirt is closed.

Skirts are of a wrap-around style and consist of panels. Aprons are worn over the skirt.

Generally, female costumes show greater variety and more elaborate ornamentation than male costumes.

Unmarried women all over

Ukraine wore their hair in one or two braids everyday. For work, young women covered their head with a kerchief. When not working, and on special occasions, maidens tied their hair back with a ribbon and inserted flowers into the ribbon on both sides of the head. Or they might cover their head with a wreath of fresh or artificial flowers with multicolored ribbons attached to the back.

Walk in the Forest

Modele lmat000003

Lena Sachuk

This set of nesting dolls represents a group of young children who are off for a walk in the forest. Each doll illustrates a child or even two, all bundled up in traditional Russian clothing. They are holding pets and forest animals.

The artist took tremendous effort to show you the beauty of Russian historic costumes. The elaborate designs on the girls' shawls and mittens, as well as decorative embroideries on the coats are outstanding. The combination of the sweet faces of these children with marvelous details of the work make it an exceptional piece of art that would fill with warmth any interior or add spark to any art collection.

| This dolls set is decorated with paintings of young people dressed in traditional Russian winter costumes. Shawls and coats are decorated with intricate designs; faces are blushing from the frost. The designs of shawls and clothing are historically accurate and are based on the designs of clothing worn in Russian village in the beginning of the 19th century. Young people and children painted holding animals: kittens, ship and even a rabbit. The smallest doll depicts a little girl holding a rag-doll. |

| 5 dolls. This set of dolls symbolizes a Cossack's family wearing their traditional embroidered clothing. Cossacks were peasant-soldiers in Ukraine and in several other regions of the former Russian Empire who, until 1918, held certain privileges in return for rendering military service. They would venture into the prairie for fighting with enemies for weeks and then return home to join their families and work on the farms. Cossacks have long appealed to romantics as idealizing freedom and resistance to external authority, and their military exploits against enemies of the Russian people have contributed to this favorable image. |

5 dolls. Russian Folk Tale of Hen the Ryaba (also known as "The Speckled Hen and the Golden Egg").

Russian Folk Tale of Hen the Ryaba

Once there lived an old man and his wife and they had a speckled hen, named Ryaba. One day the hen laid an egg and not a simple egg but a golden one. The old man tried to break it and couldn't and his wife tried to break it and couldn't, a mouse went by, wagged her tail, the egg rolled, fell down and broke.

The old man is crying and his wife is crying but the hen is clucking - Don't you cry grandpa, don't you cry grandma, I'll lay a new egg, and not a golden but a simple one.

Russian Folk tale of Turnip is learned by almost every Russian-speaking toddler. It teaches about teamwork, support and friendship.

A tale of Turnip:

An old man planted a turnip. It grew so big that he could not pull it out of soil. He called his old woman, but still they could not pull out the turnip. They called the granddaughter, the dog and the cat but still to no avail. Then they called the mouse, pulled all together and pulled the turnip out. The tale shows that teamwork and friendship can solve all problems.

Russian Tale "Gusi-Lebedi"

Modele tmat000029

Tatiana Morozova

5 dolls. Russian Tale

"Gusi-Lebedi" (also knows as
"Tale of Geese- Swans")

The tale is about adventure of a girl names Alenushka and her little brother Ivanushka in the domain of Baba Yaga, popular character of Slavic folk tales. The set of the dolls represents the father, the mother of the family, two children and Baba Yaga, who according to tales practices
witchcraft and likes to steal,
cook, and eat little children.

Tale of Geese- Swans

Once upon a time lived a family. One day parents decided to travel into the city for the fair and ordered their daughter Alenushka to look after her younger brother Ivanushka. Distracted by the game with her girlfriend, Alenushka completely forgot
about her little brother.
Suddenly she saw that Ivanushka was taken away by Geese-Swans. Alenushka decided to find her brother and bring him back. On her way she ran into The Stove and asked if it saw her brother.
The Stove answered that she will talk only after Alenushka tries one of The Stove's freshly baked cakes. Being in too much of a hurry, Alenushka refused. Next she met The Apple Tree and asked it the same question.
The Apple Tree offered some apples to Alenushka, but Alenushka said that she would not like its apples. The disappointed Apple Tree did not help Alenushka either. Then the girl saw The Milk River. She asked the river about her brother, but didn't want to drink the milk, so the Milk River refused to help as well. Soon Alenushka found herself in the middle of a very deep forest, in front of a wooden hut standing on two chicken legs. It was a house of Baba Yaga, an old wicked evil woman practicing witchcraft. Alenushka saw her little brother in the hut, grabbed him and started running away. Baba Yaga saw that and ordered Geese-Swans to chase and catch the children. Alenushka with her brother ran and ran and suddenly, they saw Geese-Swans. Kids ran to the Milk River and asked it to hide them. The Milk River offered Alenushka to drink some milk and the girl agreed, so the River hid children. When Geese-Swans flew back Alenushka took her brother and they ran to their house. Geese-Swans were after them again, but children came to the Apple Tree and asked it to hide them. The Tree agreed when Alenushka ate its apple. Next children came to the Stove and it hid Alenushka and Ivanushka after the girl ate a cake. Geese-Swans tried to get the children but couldn't, they only burned their wings and flew back to Baba Yaga. Finally, children came home safely and from that time Alenushka always looked after her brother.

5 dolls.

A tale of Goldfish (by A.Pushkin, XIX cent): tells a story of an old mad who caught a magic Goldfish that made wishes come true. The old man's wife first demanded a new trough, then a new home and so on and so forth. In the end the Goldfish got angry and took away all that she had given. The moral of the tale is to show that people need to appreciate what they already have in their lives.

SADKO

In the fable of Sadko, a man appearing to be a poor psaltery player, has talents which are neglected by the merchants of the City of Novgorod. However Sadko, was indeed a very talented person. This was the reason that the beautiful Sea princess, Volkhova, daughter of Tsar Morskoi, the King of the Sea, was charmed by Sandko's music and songs. Eventually, the princess Volkhova fell in love with the psaltery player.

Princess Volkhova gave Sadko a chance to redeem himself when betting on the incidence of golden fish in Lake Ilmen. Sadko won his wager, which had been his life against the wealth of all merchant ships. He took the ships and asked the townspeople to take care of his wife, Lubava, and set sail.

On his journey, Sadko visited Venice, Scandinavia, Egypt, India and many other countries. But, as the ships sailed back to Russia, the wind ceased and the ships could not move. It was that then Sadko realized that because the people had not made proper sacrifices to the Tsar Morskoi, king of the Sea, the ships now stood still. In order to save the sailors Sadko sacrificed himself and jumped into the water.

Instantly a brisk breeze filled the sails of the ships and they sailed away towards home.

Sadko fell to the bottom of the sea and found himself in the palace of the Tsar Morskoi.
The King and Queen of the Sea had heard about Sadko's musical talents and asked him to play and to sing for them.
They were overjoyed and decided to make Sadko stay in Sea Tsardom and promised Volkhova to be his bride. But Sadko told Volkhova that he couldn't marry her, as he still loved his wife, Lubava. Upset, but still loving the psaltery player, she helped Sadko to pluck away with the help of a flock of sea-horses which took Sadko back to the shore of Lake Ilmen.

Tired from the journey,
Volkhova sings a lullaby to Sadko and he falls asleep.
Volkhova kisses him quietly
and disappears into the mist,
thus becoming the river Volkhova which flows from Lake Ilmen to the sea.
Sadko's wife, Lubava, who was waiting for her husband
all that time, was overjoyed to see her beloved husband
again.
They lived happily ever after.

The fable of Sadko was put beautifully into verse by Russian poet Alexander Pushkin. In the tale, a man appearing to be a poor psalter player has talents that are neglected by the merchants of the city of Novgorod. However, Sadko was indeed a very talented person. Sadko's music and songs charmed the beautiful Sea princess Volkhova, daughter of Tsar Morskoi, the King of the Sea. Eventually, the princess Volkhova fell in love with the psalter player. This wonderful tale inspired the artists to create an equally beautiful lacquer box.

This work was inspired by the town of Suzdal in Vladimir region, which is located 210 kilometers north east of Moscow..

A picturesque romantic town, where you can at the same time feel the Russian country life and enjoy walks around fairy tale dome convents. Inside Suzdal the atmosphere is as if nothing had changed since the nineteenth century, goats, chicken and cows graze freely next to the Kremlin and monasteries, and on the grassy lanes.

The hilly green town, that looks more like a village, is very seducing, walking around is a pleasure, the monasteries offer dreaming views...

THE STORY OF THE
SLEEPING BEAUTY by A.S.
Pushkin

Once upon a time in a land
far, far away an evil queen sat with her magic mirror in her hand. She was appalled when this mirror revealed to her that she was no longer the most beautiful in all the land, but that a young princess was instead.

In her rage, the evil queen ordered that the princess be led deep into the forest, and then be killed. However, the old woman assigned the grim task of leading the beautiful girl astray took pity upon her intended victim, and left her in the forest without killing her. In the forest the princess found shelter with seven
"bogatrysts"(warriors), and she lived there very happily. She had no idea that back in the castle the wicked queen's magic mirror had told her the secret of the girl's whereabouts, and that the queen had made plans to ensure that the princess would not once again escape her wrath.

One day the beautiful princess was approached by a seemingly harmless old woman who offered her a delicious red apple. The naive princess never suspected that it was the evil queen in disguise, and gladly took the apple, whereupon her first bite she fell into a deep, seemingly irreversible sleep.

All hope was not to be lost. Far away the great Prince Yelesei had heard of the fate befallen his love, and set out to break this spell which had cast her into such a deep sleep. He rode on his horse, inquiring the moon, the wind, and the sun, as to where his princess could be found. He finally found her sleeping body encased in a crystal tomb. Smashing the tomb with his sword, he broke the evil spell, and the princess awoke. They lived happily ever after.

The evil queen however, did not. She died of grief as soon as her mirror revealed to her that the princess would live happily ever after.

Lena Sachuk

Pereslavl-Zalesskyi, an ancient Russian town, is home to wonderful structures of the Spasso-Preobrojenskii Sobor (cathedral) and has long been famous, all over Russia, for children's toys so skillfully made by its talented inhabitants. Lena Sachuk's skills and talent has formed and developed in this culturally rich area. Her fabulous hand-made creations have their real-life origins in the depths of Russian culture and history. The present statuette is a remarkable example of this interesting facet of Russian art.

The statuette is of a kind and wise gnome, holding a violin and being accompanied by a dove (known as symbol of peace) and an owl (symbol of wisdom). The plot of the paintings is build around a child's dream of visiting gnomes' house. On the front of the doll, you can see a little child tucked into his bed and surrounded by carrying gnomes. They are showing him different toys and try to entertain him. Lower in the picture, you can see a group of gnomes under the Christmas Tree, opening presents, dancing, and talking to each other. This innocent and kind picture will bring joy to any person or household.

Lena Sachuk

Lena Sachuk, the author of this wonderful creation, is originally from Pereslavl-Zalesskyi, where she developed her skills and learned of traditional Russian art of painting wooden dolls, which Pereslavl is so famous for.

This is a statuette of a Russian Santa, holding a sack, full of presents for the children, on his shoulder. The plot of the painting that decorates the statuette is based on the children's fairy tails about gnomes. Merry Gnomes- musicians gathered under the Christmas tree to play their simple reed pipes and violins, dance and celebrate the beginning of the New Year. Please take a closer look at the details on the statuette's coat, hat and mittens. They are decorated with wonderfully executed traditional folk designs. The back of the sack that the Santa is holding is painted with winter scenery typical for Russian rural areas, with birches and wild ash trees, covered with snow.

This wonderful example of traditional Russian art will be a great present to anybody, and will bring warmth and joy this holiday season.

Galina Russ

Galina Russ, the author of this cheerful and kind Russian Santa has been working concentrating in her creative work on dolls portraying Father Frost for over five years. Today, the development of the exclusive designs of painted toys is the core of her work. Artist's work stands out with its individuality, unusual warmth, and the inimitable picturesque. Characters from author's paintings always provoke vivid interest and liking in the audience.

Please take a closer look to make sure you do not miss any of the complex and intricate details of the paintings on the figurine. The doll itself is a smiling Father Frost (Russian equivalent of Santa) with his sack of presents and holding on to a walking stick. The sleeves and lapel of his coat, hat and mittens are thoroughly decorated with traditional Russian floral designs. The beard of the Farther Frost is decorated with branches of bright red wild ash berries.

The front of the statuette is painted with a scene of celebrating Christmas - winter evening. Young children are playing with Santa. Along with children, you can see some of the animals around them: a rabbit and a cat.

An artist's work is very complex and captivating. A part of artist's sole, as well as the positive energy that was put into the work is captured in the final product.

| Russian Tale "Gusi-Lebedi" Russian Tale "Gusi-Lebedi" (also knows as "Tale of Geese-Swans") The tale is about adventure of a girl names Alenushka and her little brother Ivanushka in the domain of Baba Yaga, popular character of Slavic folk tales. The set of the dolls represents the father, the mother of the family, two children and Baba Yaga, who according to tales practices witchcraft and likes to steal, cook, and eat little children. Tale of Geese- Swans Once upon a time lived a family. One day parents decided to travel into the city for the fair and ordered their daughter Alenushka to look after her younger brother Ivanushka. Distracted by the game with her girlfriend, Alenushka completely forgot about her little brother. Suddenly she saw that Ivanushka was taken away by Geese-Swans. Alenushka decided to find her brother and bring him back. On her way she ran into The Stove and asked if it saw her brother. The Stove answered that she will talk only after Alenushka tries one of The Stove's freshly baked cakes. Being in too much of a hurry, Alenushka refused. Next she met The Apple Tree and | asked it the same question. The Apple Tree offered some apples to Alenushka, but Alenushka said that she would not like its apples. The disappointed Apple Tree did not help Alenushka either. Then the girl saw The Milk River. She asked the river about her brother, but didn't want to drink the milk, so the Milk River refused to help as well. Soon Alenushka found herself in the middle of a very deep forest, in front of a wooden hut standing on two chicken legs. It was a house of Baba Yaga, an old wicked evil woman practicing witchcraft. Alenushka saw her little brother in the hut, grabbed him and started running away. Baba Yaga saw that and ordered Geese-Swans to chase and catch the children. Alenushka with her brother ran and ran and suddenly, they saw Geese-Swans. Kids ran to the Milk River and asked it to hide them. The Milk River offered Alenushka to drink some milk and the girl agreed, so the River hid children. When Geese-Swans flew back Alenushka took her brother and they ran to their house. Geese-Swans were after them again, but children came to the Apple Tree and asked it to hide them. The Tree agreed when Alenushka ate its apple. Next children came to the Stove and it hid Alenushka and Ivanushka after the girl ate a cake. Geese-Swans tried to get the children but couldn't, they only burned their wings and flew back to Baba Yaga. Finally, children came home safely and from that time Alenushka always looked after her brother.

Russian Folk tale of Turnip
Russian Folk tale of Turnip is learned by almost every Russian-speaking toddler. It teaches about teamwork, support and friendship.

A tale of Turnip:

An old man planted a turnip. It grew so big that he could not pull it out of soil. He called his old woman, but still they could not pull out the turnip. They called the granddaughter, the dog and the cat but still to no avail. Then they called the mouse, pulled all together and pulled the turnip out. The tale shows that teamwork and friendship can solve all problems.

| This is a carving of one of the characters one can come across in Russian Folk tales. This is starichek-lesovichek, or a forest gnome. He is said to be wise and kind. Forest gnome is a character known not only to protect the forest, but also to be helpful to people. He looks like an old man no larger than the biggest mushroom in the forest. In the tales, he is said to choose the largest mushroom in the forest as his home. Sometime he is also represented as a mushroom with the face of an old man. In the fare tales, he would appear on the traveler's path in the forest and give directions or advise. According to the folklore, in the days of old, people used to say a prayer to this gnome before setting forth into the forest for berries and mushrooms, asking him to show them the best harvest and promising not too take to much. |

Domovoy- the kind household spirit

Modele sw000009

Sergey Blagodarov

The belief in the pagan gods of nature never quite died out even after Russians embraced Christianity. Thus there is a wide variety of different spirits of forests, houses, rivers, etc that are present in the folk art and are still honored and respected by some.

In Russian folklore a domovoy is a household spirit. He looks like a tiny old man whose face is covered with white beard. There is a domovoy in each house, and he watch not only the house itself but all the inhabitants as well. This spirit is a big trickster and mischief-maker: he tickles sleeping people, squalls, knocks on the wall, throws pans and plates – just for the sake of fun. He is on good terms with the domovye of the houses next-door to his own – until they start pilfering; then he gets up to protect the house and the property.

There are different kinds of the domovye – their name slightly changes too, to reflect the place they inhabit. There is a dvorovoy who lives in a courtyard, as well as bannik, who tends to the bathhouse.

A domovoy is fond of those people who take good care of their property and he does not like lazy-bones and trollops and tries to hurt and harm them in every way.

Russian domovoy resembles in many ways the Scottish brownie. It was represented as an elongated carved wooden

This frolicsome carving is a work by artist Sergey Martinovich. The amazing character and details of the carving are outstanding.

This is a carved wooden figurine of a forest gnome ("starichek-lesovichek" in Russian, word by word translation "forest old man"). This Russian folk character should not be confused with "Leshiy" ("wild man of the woods"), also traditional in Russian folklore. "Leshiy" were the solitary guardians of the forest and each major section of the woodlands had one. As guardians of the forest, they found no dishonor in misleading travelers and playing cruel jokes on them. Forest gnome on the other hand is a character known not only to protect the forest, but also to be helpful to people. He looks like an old man no larger than the biggest mushroom in the forest. | The folklore and superstitions surrounding owls have passed down through the centuries of humankind, from the ancient times of the Greeks to the present. The perceptions of owls are a paradox – which means something that has two complete opposites found together within it. Owls have been hailed as symbols of intelligence, yet they also have been feared and seen as signs of evil or death. In Russian folklore, owl was always portrayed as a wise bird. It was never necessarily always kind to people, sometimes even could be found by the side of Baba Yaga, who according to tales practices witchcraft and likes to steal, cook, and eat little children. The idea that owls are the pets of witches also began to develop in Europe during the Middle Ages, and persisted into the Renaissance in some communities. There was a belief that a witch often had a “familiar,” a creature that she kept not only as a pet but close friend and companion. The familiar was often a small animal, such as a cat, toad, dog, mouse – or an owl. The familiar was supposed to be a demon or even the devil himself in the form of an animal. |

"Forest Gnome" with a spoon

Modele sw000002

Sergey Blagodarov

This frolicsome carving is a work by artist Sergey Martinovich. The amazing character and details of the carving are outstanding.

This is a carved wooden figurine of a forest gnome ("starichek-lesovichek" in Russian, word by word translation "forest old man"). This Russian folk character should not be confused with "Leshiy" ("wild man of the woods"), also traditional in Russian folklore. "Leshiy" were the solitary guardians of the forest and each major section of the woodlands had one. As guardians of the forest, they found no dishonor in misleading travelers and playing cruel jokes on them. Forest gnome on the other hand is a character known not only to protect the forest, but also to be helpful to people. He looks like an old man no larger than the biggest mushroom in the forest. In the tales, he is said to choose the largest mushroom in the forest as his home. This forest gnome is known as a kind and wise character that looks after flowers, berries and mushrooms in the forest. According to the folklore, in the days of old, people used to say a prayer to this gnome before setting forth into the forest for berries and mushrooms, asking him to show them the best harvest and promising not to take too much.
